Children's/YA Librarian Report (Audrey Snowden):

September was a good transitional month, and we're still getting a great response to having Miss Amy back! We're going to try and take Toddler Jam and It's Story Time! through October outside in the park, in the pavilion if it rains. PAWS to Read is ready to go, and although it did not get off the ground in September (we were ready but our takers were not), there are a few signups for the October dates. We expected to have people back in the building by now, but that isn't going to happen for a while, so kits for kids and teens continue to be popular offerings. We were excited to get a response (via Google Form) on the Oakland Park StoryWalk; a young patron submitted their favorite chipmunk sighting from the StoryWalk and came in to collect a small prize pack. October should bring more of the same (yoga, Toddler Jam, It's Story Time!, Among Us) and an outdoor Halloween event at the end of the month.

Building and Grounds

Changes and additions to capital improvement requests for next year are due on October 7th.

One addition may be replacing the formica on the large table in Tech Services.

We picked up three book carts in good condition from a library that was giving them away.

Technology

The 10 hotspots received through Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners Public Hotspot program and funded through the American Rescue Program Act are now available for loan to patrons.

Other

A patron brought in a Monarch Butterfly chrysalis from a larva that she found on a Milkweed plant in front of the library to put on display at the Library. It emerged from the chrysalis on Friday morning the 24th of September, and we released it the following day. It promptly flew to the top of a nearby tree in preparation for its trip to Mexico.

We welcomed two additional library substitutes in September.

I submitted the State Financial report to the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.
