

Gold

Once upon a time in July there was a town located in South Carolina. It was a very small town. The town made their money from crops and riches. That town mostly was wealthy until July, the rainy season, which made everybody in town miserable. The farms were getting flooded and the little tiny sprouts were getting killed. Everybody in town was getting worried because that year all the plants were getting killed and they usually don't.

Then the mayor of the town was also worrying about his town. So the mayor declared that they shall start to sell all their riches to buy their food and supplies. A couple weeks later the rain was gone and every day started to get sunnier and warmer, but then it stopped at a certain amount of heat. The townspeople were talking one day about what's going to happen because the rain stopped.

"I wonder what the Mayor is going to do?", questioned Richard

"I mean yeah what is his going to do?" said Richmond, Richard 's twin. The next day the mayor announced that all men over 30 will go to the abandoned mines to find gold and rare minerals and rocks. The mayor also declared that only men shall go to the mines. The boys and young men will help with crops. The woman and girls stay home and stay put, do not go outside. So from that day on those were the rules until ...

A man named Lukus came back with a bag full of gold. He went to his family and his home, left a tiny piece of gold and went to the mayor. Lukus explained that he found the gold all by himself and told them all the other men were still finding gold. The mayor was so joyful for the gold he found, he stop worrying about everything. They sold the gold a couple days later and got so much money they shared it with the townspeople.

The only thing that was off was the men that went to the mines weren't back yet and it had been a couple weeks. The mayor was worried that they died so he asked his most loyal brave friend to go check on the mines. The mayor's friend came back with all the men tired ,hungry ,and having no clue what happened. The mayor and the men had a talk. The men told the mayor that a man went missing and they went to go find him. They explained that that man had a bag of gold and his name was Lukus. The mayor was so shocked that a man lied to him and that Lukus told him he found it by himself but all the men together found it not just him. The mayor threatened Lukus for doing something that bad and he never lied again to the mayor again

The End
