Letter from the President

Here it is the end of June, and I don’t know about you, but I am in my happy place – the summer months.

Even though there is ALWAYS more work during July and August, I still enjoy it thoroughly. Our two children and their spouses come down along with the seven grandkids. There is good food and, according at least one child, yucky food. Laughter, and a few tears because let’s face it – it’s not easy being three or in your elder years with a whole bunch of ages in between.

Fourth of July parade for the younger ones – watching their excitement (I think it’s more the game of who can get the most candy). Lots of sunshine, and a few rainy days when one can catch one’s breath. The beach – where we pull our circle together and enjoy building castles, looking for shells, trying to catch crabs (with lots of screams), paddleboarding, burying a child (or two) in the sand, and eating sandy food. Mini golf where everyone claims to be the “winner” and the “discussion” of who actually won carries on for a couple of days. Ice cream treats when, depending how hot it is, we see who eats their ice cream and who wears it. The Bourne Brave games where I’m not sure which is more fun – watching the game, eating from the concession stand, standing in the outfield trying to catch balls that go over the fence, or purchasing great souvenirs. However, the best part of the summer are the backyard games – whiffle ball, football, cornhole – where the adults turn into children and the children become the adults.

Having stated my joy for the summer months (and I DO enjoy them), I must confess that on the last Sunday of August, when the cars (all six of them) are packed up and everyone is wearing their seatbelts as they prepare to take off towards home, my husband and I wait for the cars to clear the driveway – waving – and then we dance while whispering in each other’s ear – thank God they went home!!

I hope you all enjoy your summer months as much as I enjoy mine!

See you in September! (Don’t forget to come visit us at Canal Day on September 17 or volunteer to help for a shift at the Friends’ tent. We would love to see you there!)

Warmly,

Marilyn Tarallo

It’s Almost Time to Celebrate

Canal Day!

September 17, 2022
11 a.m.-6 p.m.

Canal Day, sponsored by the Cape Cod Chamber of Commerce, is a free community event that takes place in Buzzards bay Park, on the bank of the Cape Cod Canal. There are arts and crafts vendors, all-day music on the stage, and a 5-K race. Many community organizations use the day to promote their activities, including the Friends of the Jonathan Bourne Library.

We will have a tent at Canal Day manned by the Friends Board members and other volunteers. Some of the activities suggested for our booth include:

- games related to the Centennial quilt that hangs in the Bourne Library, including matching the pictures in a rolling wheel with prizes
- teaser and display to promote the fall book sale
- FJBPL membership applications
- library card applications
- A display of past, present, future library programs
- Pins
- Copies of the Bourne quilt coloring book if available by that date

Anne Gregory and Helen Bresnahan will be co-chairing our participation in Canal Day. For more information or to volunteer to help on September 17, contact Helen at sunriseday110@aol.com.

Museum Passes for Summer Fun

It’s those lazy, hazy days of summer, right? Maybe you are sitting around trying to think of something to entertain yourself on a slow day. More likely, you are looking for activities with which to entertain your children, your visiting grandchildren, and other friends who are visiting during these months. The Jonathan Bourne Library has the answer.

Thanks to the Friends of the Library, there are many passes available for museums and other attractions this summer, including:

- Boston Children’s Museum
- Buttonwood Park Zoo
- Cape Cod Children’s Museum
- Cape Cod Museum of Art
- Heritage Museum and Gardens
- Historic New England
- Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum
- Museum of Fine Arts
- New Bedford Whaling Museum
- New England Aquarium
- Plimoth Patuxet and the Mayflower
- Robbins Museum of Archeology
- Roger William Park Zoo
- Sandwich Glass Museum
- Toad Hall Sports Car Museum
- USS Constitution Museum
- Whydah Pirate Museum

Passes, which are available to CLAMS card holders, may provide free admission or deep discounts for tickets. Information about the passes can be found at the Library web page at https://bournelibrary.org/Pages/Index/182297/museum-passes.

You can reserve passes on the web page or by calling 95080 759-0600, ext. 6101. It is important to check with the museum or other attraction to get full details on their current admission policy.
The home of the Bourne Historical Preservation Society, locally known as the Briggs-McDermott House, sits across the street from the Library. You pass it every time you visit the Library. On June 17 there was a program at the Library on the history of the house and the gardens. The Bourne Historical Preservation Society (BHPS) hosted the garden program to kick off re-opening the house. Since the 1980s the Aptucxet Garden Club (AGC) has maintained the front flower garden and the side kitchen herb garden. Here is a brief overview of the program.

Two dozen folks gathered to learn about the gardens at the Briggs-McDermott House.

Louise Innis, President of BHPS opened the program and thanked the Aptucxet Garden Club for its ongoing support of the gardens. Many of the members present were both Friends of the Library and members of the AGC.

Pat Nemeth presented the history of the house and the kitchen garden. She began by going back in time to life in the 1850s. This property was a large farm in downtown Bourne.

The kitchen garden would have been planted with herbs like rosemary and sage, medicinal plants like chamomile, and plants like tansy to keep insects out of the house. Every plant has a story to tell.

The kitchen garden in May 2022.

Chamomile was grown as a tea for strength.
Here is the Briggs-McDermott house on a winter’s day in the 1880’s. The family is in front of the house and their barns are shown on the right-hand side of the photo.

Kathy Sargent-O’Neill gave a fascinating presentation on the history of ornamental gardens, going back to ancient times. In the past ornamental gardens were developed by Kings and Queens. But by the late 1800’s families began to plant ornamental gardens at their homes.

Kathy had wonderful historic photos of the house. She reviewed the construction of the fence in front of the house and the flower garden. This garden is a mix of perennials and annuals.

Kathy closed her talk by discussing the benefits of native pollinator plants. These plants are good for bees, the region and us! In the future native perennial pollinator plants will be added to the fence flower garden.

Everyone enjoyed the program. After the presentation, many individuals went across the street to visit the house and gardens.

In June, the community room became a tea parlor, with pink tablecloths, flowers, tea, and pastries. Sixteen folks attended The Basics of Tea, by Danielle Beaudette of the Cozy Tea Cart in Brookline, NH. While enjoying a cup of tea, they went on a photographic tour of the tea plantations in Asia.

Danielle Beaudette was the tour guide. She began as a software engineer, who loved tea. Twenty-five years ago, she attended a tea lecture in Lowell and her world was transformed. She changed careers; studied tea production at the Institute of Tea in New York; and became a certified tea master. She was fascinated “by the science behind how one plant’s leaf, based on processing, could become so many varieties of tea.”

Danielle began by explaining that there are six major types of tea made from the Camelia senensis plant: White, Yellow, Green, Oolong, Dark and Black tea. White tea has the lowest level of caffeine and black tea has the highest. In comparison, black tea has about half the amount of caffeine as a cup of coffee.

The flavor of the basic tea is affected by the soil and geographic location of the plantation, the time of the harvest, and how the tea is processed. The tea plant is a mountainous shrub and grows best at about 8,000 feet. Once the basic tea is purchased, then distributors begin mixing the leaves with other organic materials to create thousands of different blends. Ms. Beaudette spoke about mixing with compounds like cinnamon, pomegranate, calendula, and various herbs.

Danielle used photos that she had taken in Asia to explain the production process. When picked a leaf is about 85% water. The next steps in the process will dry the leaf in the sun, and then depending on the grade of tea being processed, the leaves will be rolled and roasted. When it is all done, the water will have been reduced to 3%. There are different time schedules and steps for processing each of the six basic grades. The process is very labor intensive and requires great attention to detail.

This was a fascinating program that everyone enjoyed. Many thanks to the Library staff for arranging the program and the tea party! (See the companion Book Review article on the next page about how the British stole tea from China and established a tea industry in India.)

— Pat Nemeth
One of the more popular programs at the Library in June was The Basics of Tea. This companion book review dives deeper into the history of tea.

For All the Tea in China provides a fascinating historical account how the British stole this favorite drink out of China in the 1850’s. Whether you are a fan of black tea, or green tea, you’ll find this book to be a fascinating reading experience.

Our hero is a man named Robert Fortune. He is a Scottish botanist and plant hunter, who worked for the East India Company. It was a time when the fortunes of the British empire were made on the trade of plants. The British bought tea from China and in exchange sold them opium from India. Tea had become the favorite drink in England; and opium use was at an all-time high in China.

The Chinese fiercely guarded their tea plants and tea production processes. They viewed the British as barbarians and outlawed their travel through China. If caught, a foreigner could be killed.

But the East India Company knew they could make more money if they could grow the tea on land they owned in India, in the Himalayan mountain. Here labor was cheaper, and the growing conditions were good. But there were two big problems. First, how could they steal the tea plants? And second, how could they steal the secrets to processing the tea?

Clearly, they needed a bold daring and knowledgeable botanist for the job. To accomplish this mission, Robert Fortune shaved his forehead, wove a queue braid into his hair and donned mandarin robes. Still at 6 feet 2 inches, he towered over most Chinese. Yet his disguise worked, and he managed not to get arrested. He would dedicate three years of his life to this pursuit. In the end he came home a success!

Fortune would survive many dangerous encounters. In his first year of work almost all the plants and seeds that he sent to India died en route. But from this he developed better ways to ship the seeds. When he began his travels, British botanists believed that green tea and black tea came from different plants. He learned that this was not so. Rather green tea was processed with just a few hours of drying in the sun; and black tea was cooked.

To learn more about this chapter in the history of tea, and its nefarious trading connection to opium, you will want to read this book. I give the book 5 stars!

— Pat Nemeth
June Treasurer’s Report

Greetings to warm weather and the summer! The Friends wrapped up spring with a Book Sale. The sale produced $1,626 in revenue. Many thanks to all of you who came and shopped and gave donations to the Friends.

We have received 66% of our annual membership dues. If you still have dues to pay, please due so.

Your funds help us support our many free programs. In June, the Friends paid for 15 programs, 8 for children and 7 for adults. Oh boy! We have many wonderful events planned for the summer!

Here is quick update on our budget.
