

The History Corner: “Did Someone Say Snow?”

[+ new feature added to NHHS website – Oral Histories!]

As a warm-up to our coming wintry season we share some early photos of abundant snowflakes in a variety of “downtown” settings. These were taken in the late 1800s through the 1950s – and include one Fritz Robbins etching of skiers in front of Berry Hall at New Hampton School. The lead photo is in front of Pillars – which the Bickford family ran as a guest house for many years – and asks the question, “Did someone say snow?” Other photos include: a sleigh heading west on Main Street; deep ruts in the snow on Main Street; and a horse-drawn roller packing the snow. We hope you enjoy these previews of coming attractions! We also hope you enjoy having access to the fantastic Oral History Project that the NHHS assembled in 2013. See information on our updated website (below).
